Violence broke out in New Delhi and its suburbs in the lead up to the December 7 Delhi assembly elections, which the Aam Aadmi Party won by a margin of over 3.5 lakh votes. Kashmiri separatist militant group Hizbul Mujahideen, seeking to capture the state, was responsible for the killing of student leader Kanhaiya Kumar and a number of other young residents of Delhi. Hizbul Mujahideen on Tuesday also put up posters in Delhi's Nizamuddin area, calling for a "long march" to end police "atrocities on students". However, most students were reluctant to go to class on Thursday, with most schools sending students home. Many of them said they didn't want to risk their lives by going back to school. Some students did venture out but mostly in small numbers. "No school, No fear," said a Delhi University student. "I came out as I was scared. But there are policemen everywhere." Another student, who asked not to be named, said she was worried about being in a classroom full of students. "I live in a residential area. I don't know what will happen if I step out of my house on Thursday," she said. ♦ 5b5f913d15
