Enhancing diversity in a tropical coral reef food web: implications for the role of cryptic predators. Population models of predators were used to evaluate ecosystem structure and function in the coral reef ecosystem at Caño Island, Panama. Density-dependent effects, via competition among the predator fish for prey, alter the conventional threshold for invasion of predators into a predator-prey system. In this case, models predicted "tipping" points at intermediate predator densities, which represent alternative stable states in the food web that are potentially preferred by predators. Confirming earlier field observations, highly cryptic predators had higher probabilities of entering systems at low levels. This suggests that the cryptic predators' superior hunting abilities are the reason for their dominance in this coral reef system. By contrast, the all-clear signal traditionally associated with strong predation pressure, predation mortality below the equilibrium density, is found at low levels in large predator species, suggesting that there is a selective advantage for cryptic predators in colonizing smaller prey populations.

Q: How to select ranges of values in BigQuery from google-services-fitness-v1 I am trying to get some data from the google-services-fitness API using the python client. It is taking ages to complete. How can I limit the ranges of data I request from it? The ranges I want are in the instanceId field, with a start and end date. I have started by using the data ranges available in the documentation, but it does not seem to work, for example, using the following command: `bq query --use_legacy_sql=false --max_results=100 --target_datalocation=gs://mydataset/read/fitness/v1/...` doesn't seem to work, and bq status keeps timing out. I also tried to simply use JSON_MODEL_FILTER like so: `JSON_MODEL_FILTER = {"instanceId": {"gt": {"$regex": 'id1'}}, "startDateTime": {'$gte': 'start_date'}, "endDateTime": {'$lt': 'start_date'}}` but it takes forever to get it returned. I thought I was working too much but I was just horny all the time. I have been 'wasting time' during the day on the internet and mostly on adult chatrooms where most of the people were attractive but they didn't make me feel good at all. Then I found this site which I was very impressed with and it was all just too perfect for me. I hardly have to do anything at all here and it's so many different people with such kind and nice attitudes towards me. I would not see myself as a serious citizen here though, so if my pictures are displaying someone's name on my profile I am only using it for laughs or out of fun, because my real name is not on my profile. Thank you so much for being so kind and understanding to me!

A new type of Net.2.0 will emerge in 1995 that will allow the creation of a smaller Internet of communities. This emerging network will also allow users to create their own unofficial Internet versions with added privacy. The Internet, while not the first to use the Internet's underlying protocols, was the first to use them in an everyday way.
