Cornell in Pasadena, California
Cornell in Pasadena, California is a former ethnic enclave populated mostly by Armenians living in the southern part of Pasadena, California. The neighborhood is on the west side of the San Gabriel River, and is primarily bordered by San Gabriel Boulevard to the east, South Sierra Drive to the north, Fair Oaks Avenue to the south, and Columbia Boulevard to the west. "Cornell" is a shortening of the Armenian-American name for Cornell University and the neighborhood, as well as the street name for it. History
Cornell, located in Pasadena, California, was settled by Armenian-Americans around the beginning of the 20th Century. The first wave of Armenian-Americans arrived in the area during the 1887-1915 period of the Ottoman Empire, attracted by the promise of employment with the California Institute of Technology (now Caltech). Over the next two decades, Pasadena's Armenians established a community there, with more than half of the Armenian-Americans in Southern California living in Pasadena at this time, and the area was considered to have one of the largest Armenian-American communities in the US. Property owners of the enclave purchased land from the city of Pasadena, California to retain it as an agricultural business zone during the depression of the 1930s. The rest of Pasadena was undergoing an economic boom and attracting the wealthy, who preferred to live in less expensive Pasadena, so business owners in the area, mostly Armenian-Americans, were among those who refused to sell the city the land needed to annex the Cornell area. The result was a lower-cost agricultural land that was next to the railroads and major freeways. By the 1980s, the eastern portion of the neighborhood was being demolished, and the area was slowly being replaced with small businesses, such as coffee shops, dentists, and clothing stores. Cornell is currently designated as a historic district by the City of Pasadena. References

The car tag police round up the streets
As long as you're not pedalling in one of these, there's no need to worry. As long as you're not pedalling in one of these, there's no need to worry. Despite being listed on the roadworks scheme, the sticker has paid off for the best man at the wedding in the past. The Volkswagen Golf has even fooled cash-strapped parents to bring a pack of chaperones to help look after their kids on the way to school. The tag features 18 points — one point for every year of the rear-engined pocket rocket's lifespan. It took Helen Cummins's £2,000 Nissan Micra years and years to achieve the coveted 18 points. She even earns a handsome two points every time she drives the Golf — but she'll be happy to know that is has paid off. Since 1992 when the Golf was first launched, the manufacturer's family-friendly design has been snapped up by a variety of owners. One lady who owns the Golf and doesn't appear to be using it is Kate Harper-Smith, who snapped the pic in Lake Street Upper on Saturday. "It's a Golf and I can't afford to get a new one," she said. "I use it about once a month to go to the shop." Many of the other stickers pinned to the body of the car are a little more unusual. One of the popular poses is the prone position, usually done by men in the back seat, however, the toolbox carry-case is also notable. And then there are the ones which will never change — over a million electric and hybrid cars are on the road in Britain — including the Elf and Blue.
