While some parents are all about sugary sodas, sodas with cola, or sporty sodas, I tend to be more of a tea drinker. I love tea with honey, and sometimes I like a little lemon or lime juice in it, but I mainly drink the hot stuff. So, to enjoy tea the way I do, I want a way to keep my tea hot. I also like my tea to stay chilled or at the very least, not be ice cold. Enter: Rooibos Ice Tea Stove The Rooibos Ice Tea Stove is the perfect tea stove. It has a nice sturdy base that makes it stable and it offers a number of features. The unit holds 6 cups of tea With a large capacity, this stove makes it easy to enjoy several cups of tea at once. It also helps make it easy to carry a thermos back and forth. A nice sized handle makes for easy carrying and pouring While drinking a tall glass of hot tea is a lovely and traditional way to enjoy tea, I find that pouring with a pitcher or decanter takes up too much space. The Rooibos Ice Tea Stove offers a nice option for a more compact way to enjoy tea. The bottom of the stove also has a beverage mat for keeping your drink warm and moist. I've found the cups to be a nice touch. They are made of a very thick glass that is easy to manage for adults as well as children. To use the stove, you fill the unit with water, add your tea and then you fill the mat with hot water. The unit is much better at keeping the tea hot than when the water is already warm or hot. The Rooibos Ice Tea Stove comes in a nice black steel box with a locking lid. I also really like the idea of not having to use the stove to maintain your tea. I find that the mat does a really good job keeping the tea warm and is a lot more user friendly than using the stove itself. For more information on the Roob

The use of paramagnetic metal ion tags in combination with lanthanide tags to enhance the resolution of protein separations is demonstrated. The complexes of Gd³⁺ and Dy³⁺ with several peptide tags were used to attach the tags to acetic acid-treated bovine serum albumin (BSA) in order to enhance the separation of BSA from immunoglobulins. The BSA peptide tag group was formed as follows: ##STR1## on BSA by reaction with S-acetylated homoserine ethyl esters of: Gd²⁺, Dy³⁺, Tb³⁺, Sm³⁺, Er³⁺, Yb³⁺, Y³⁺, Lu³⁺, Na⁺ and K⁺. The paramagnetic Gd³⁺ or Dy³⁺ chelates were demonstrated to enhance the resolution of BSA from immunoglobulins on silica-based magnetic field gradient columns by approximately 100%. The efficiency of the separation depended on the relative hydrophobicity of the tag, as judged by TLC
